

THE ZOBEASTS

A long time ago before you and I were born, there lived a wise wizard whose name was Lord Zob. He had a pure heart and genuine compassion for the welfare of children. At that time he was encumbered in tragedy having lost a son at birth and his grief weighed heavily. So much so that one day he began to draw pictures of strange creatures, each one with a different talent to assist a child's well-being and growth and place in life.

His fascination and passion for his creatures grew and grew. He gave them names and fully formed characters and he nurtured them into being as if they were his own children.

Stranger things have happened but in wizard world it's not uncommon for odd surprises to crop up here and there! One early morning just before sun had bid goodnight to moon, Lord Zob had a vivid dream. He didn't wait for the day to fully open and sprung out of bed to fulfil his vision. His creatures would be called The Zobeasts and they would live in a flying book!

This was surely his life's mission. Upon hearing a child's cry for help the creatures would make themselves known via a secret message, a conversation, or even a dream! Once the child's interest was sparked these unique beasts would create an invisible portal for the child to enter. At this point there would be no going back! Only children who truly believed in their powers would be secretly invited. But the magical part isn't about finding the book, and that's if at all, no... it's the journey the child must undertake during their search for this exclusive prize - and this is all part of the wonder.

And Lord Zob's vision is still alive today. They may live in a flying book and help children better themselves throughout the world but Bastor, Hullychu, Qizzamo, Wozlas, Praaskie and Konsheeus are as real and powerful as your mind wants them to be. Perhaps one day you'll need The Zobeasts - all you have to do is believe.
